Subject: Costs Associated with Changing Terminology from Junior Doctors to Resident Doctors

Q1 Total expenditure to date associated with changing the terminology for junior doctors to "resident doctors" within your NHS Trust. This should include, but is not limited to:

- a) Costs associated with updating internal documents, policies, and systems
- b) Costs of staff training or communication initiatives related to the change.
- c) Costs of any external consultancy or support sought for this purpose.

A1 Information not held - there are no costs associated with this change.

Q2 An estimate of any further costs that the Trust anticipates incurring in relation to this change in terminology. Please provide a breakdown of these projected costs.

A2 Information not held - the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA) gives rights of public access to information held by public authorities.

This right covers all recorded information held by a public authority; public authorities only have to provide information they already have in recorded form, they do not have to create new information or provide estimated information.

Q3 A brief explanation of the reasons behind these expenditures and how they contribute to the effective implementation of the new terminology.

A3 Information not held – as per A1
